17 Years at Holy Trinity School By Declan Leonard

That all three of our kids went to Holy Trinity School started out as an afterthought. It was the early 2000s, and we were having second thoughts about the language immersion program at our local elementary school. On a whim we attended a Holy Trinity School Open House, having been parishioners of the Parish for many years prior. I still vividly remember sitting in what was then the Holy Trinity Theater, as we listened to a presentation about an elementary school that would become a school home for our family of three kids for the next 17 years.

As a parent, my first real interaction with Holy Trinity School was the annual Trivia Night the year our oldest daughter was in kindergarten, nearly a decade and a half ago. Back then, the school grounds were so limited at Holy Trinity that we had to borrow space at nearby Blessed Sacrament to accommodate what was consistently a large turnout of enthusiastic school parents. The parents we met that night, bonding over kegs of beer and paying “bribes” for trivia clues, would become life-long friends. Our unbeatable team, appropriately nicknamed “Dynasty” and equipped less with brains and more with checkbooks, would go on to dominate many Trivia Nights thereafter.

The first time I heard the Holy Trinity Jesuit school motto “children for others” I wasn’t entirely clear what that meant. I decided to get more involved with the parent association at the school, and soon I was charged with helping to organize service projects for the kids and school families. As a Jesuit school, Holy Trinity has always had a very rich tradition of giving back to the community, so I had large shoes to fill in this new role. We decided as a group that the best way to instill charity in kids was with hands-on work, and from that was born the annual Gleaning Project in which school kids and parents work on a nearby farm harvesting crops to be donated to local food banks. I still remember one of the earliest gleaning projects watching car after car with “HTS” magnets pull onto the fields of Miller Farms in Maryland, where over a hundred members of the Holy Trinity School community worked together to clear the field of vegetables to feed the needy in our area.

As my oldest daughter graduated from Holy Trinity School and went to high school down the street, the temptation was there for me to dial it back and step aside from any formal parent role at the school while my middle son made his way through. But somehow—and I am sure drinks were involved I was egged on to head up the entire parent association for the school. I remember friends from outside Holy Trinity warning me that getting too close to any organization, let alone an elementary school, was a bad idea. What they didn’t realize was that at Holy Trinity School, we had a legend for a principal, Charlie Hennessy, who made my relatively limited role that year a piece of cake. I was privileged that year to witness first-hand how parents, teachers, and administrators can work together to make a school experience worthy of our children.

What I have always found with Holy Trinity School is that, whatever we lack in space and amenities, we make up in community. Community is without a doubt the heart and soul of Holy Trinity School, much like it is with the Parish. When I attended a school Father’s Club BBQ event this past

FROM THE PASTOR’S DESK

This past week Ms. Wendie Williams from the Archdiocese of Washington’s Office of Cultural Diversity and Outreach sent a letter in commemoration of Black History Month. In the letter she referred to a legacy of holiness displayed by six Americans of African heritage that are being considered for canonization saints. Mother Henriette Delille (1812-1862); Julia Greeley (c. 1833-48 –1918); Mother Mary Elizabeth Lange, OSP (1789-1882); Father Augustus Tolton (1854 – 1897); Venerable Pierre Toussaint (1766 – 1853) and Sr. Thea Bowman (1937-1990).

In the letter Cardinal Gregory was quoted as stating;

“They come from different eras of our nation and from many different backgrounds and regions of our country, but each one lived our Catholic faith with courageous intensity.”

Besides these six African-Americans, I would like to add a seventh candidate, Anne Marie Becraft. She and her family were once parishioners at Holy Trinity. Ann Marie was born in 1805 to William and Sara Becraft, prominent free Black Catholics. Anne Marie’s grandmother, also a free Black, worked as a housekeeper for Charles Carroll (the only Catholic signer of the Declaration of Independence).

At 15, Anne Marie became the proprietor of a day school for girls. The school operated from a house on Dumbarton Street in Georgetown. An average of 35 girls `comprised girls from the best colored families of Georgetown, Washington, Alexandria, and surrounding counties.” The school, which received the support of Holy Trinity’s pastor, Fr. Neale, became known as the Georgetown Seminary and operated as an academy for boarders and day students, one of the first for females in the District. For eight years Anne Marie as a young woman ran this school for African-American girls. Then, inspired by the example of Mother Mary Lange, she entered the fledgling Oblate Sisters of Providence in Baltimore, the first Roman Catholic religious institute for Catholic women of African descent. On September 8, 1832, Anne Marie received the religious name Sister Aloysius. The following year she took her vows and became the 11th sister to join the Oblates. She was a teaching oblate who instructed her students in arithmetic, English and embroidery. Sadly Anne Marie died shortly afterwards due to a chronic chest ailment. She is buried in Baltimore’s Old Cathedral Cemetery, while members of her family are buried at our parish’s Holy Rood Cemetery.

As you may know, several years ago Georgetown University named the oldest building on campus Anne Marie Becraft Hall. It is the first building at Georgetown University to be named after an African-American woman. Moreover, one of Holy Trinity School’s six house communities is named Becraft. While Anne Marie lived only a short time, her courageous witness has created an amazing legacy, one which may someday be deemed worthy of canonization! Just ask one of our students who proudly wears the bright purple Becraft shirt.

White Nationalism and the LGBTQ Community: The Challenge to Catholics to See All Things New

March 5, 2:30pm, Church. Reception to follow in Trinity Hall

Fr. Bryan Massingale joins us to explore how white nationalism is not simply about racism, but also a threat to the well-being of the entire LGBTQ community. This threat challenges LGBTQ Catholics to a more inclusive understanding of their/our community. It also implicates Catholic practices of complicity in both racial and sexual injustice, and a summons an Ignatian inspired imagination that sees and acts differently in response to the needs of vulnerable populations. All are welcome to this Ignatian Year event!

Fall, I realized with COVID that many of the more recent Holy Trinity School families have sadly been robbed of the opportunity to experience first-hand what a great and fun community that is Holy Trinity School. I really hope as time goes on that they get to see Holy Trinity School the way my family has experienced it—trivia nights, golf tourneys, galas, father/daughter dances, poker nights, beer...

Now I am down to my last few months of doing drop-off for my final child at Holy Trinity School. At what has long been an annual dinner gathering of some dads around Christmas Time at Fogo de Chao--these being many of the same dads I met at that first Holy Trinity School Trivia Night roughly fifteen years earlier--the talk turned to how things are going at the school these days. We realized that I was the only dad at the table who still had a kid at the school (and the only one whose hair wasn't fully gray yet). I told them that as nice as our memories of the good old days might be, that in my experience in this final year as a school parent, with Kevin McShane now at the helm assisted by Charlie Hennessy and so many dedicated teachers and administrators, Holy Trinity School is as strong if not stronger than when our family entered it 17 years ago. 🍀

2022 Tithe Grants Deadline for Submission is March 4

The large and small grant RFPs have been posted to our website. Each year the social justice ministry of Holy Trinity Catholic Church awards grants to organizations that address root causes of social justice issues both locally and within the global community. We have a "large grant" category with the goal of providing funds large enough to have a significant social justice impact. Each year the committee in conjunction with the pastor discerns the most pressing social justice issue(s) of the moment and develops a request for proposals to fund organizations seeking to address the root causes of the issue(s) in question. The focus in 2022 is early childhood development. Please pass the invitation on to partners or organizations you work with that may be candidates for either grant. Additional grants are available to organizations focused on care for our common home, youth, food insecurity, affordable housing, returning citizens and immigration. For more information, email aklick@trinity.org

Stewardship Update:

Solar Power is coming to Holy Trinity! This summer, we will be installing solar panels on the roofs of our school buildings. This is in direct support of Pope Francis's environmental encyclical Laudato Si and the Jesuit's Universal Apostolic Preference of Caring for our Common Home. Solar energy will help us greatly reduce our carbon footprint while offering significant long term financial benefits. Recently, Fr. Gillespie sent a letter asking for donations to help make this project possible. We have already raised over $150,000! Please offer your gift by clicking the Donate button in the banner at the top of our website at trinity.org or by texting SOLAR to 202-991-4483. Thank you!
