109th World Day of Migrants and Refugees

Reflection on YAC Trip to Rio Grande Valley

By Elizabeth Ash & Julie Yelle

In July, five YACs visited the U.S.–Mexico border to learn more about migration and the Catholic Church’s response. While volunteering, attending Mass, and visiting a migrant camp in Matamoros, Mexico, we had the opportunity to talk with many people about their journey to the United States and their hopes for the future. In the face of a prolonged and complicated humanitarian crisis at the border, these personal encounters were a source of consolation and motivation for us.

On Friday, we volunteered with Catholic Charities’ Humanitarian Respite Center (HRC), which offers resources and shelter to families who have just completed their immigration interviews. We helped prepare bundles of clothes for migrants headed to their final destinations, then served dinner to about 400 people who were staying overnight. (The volunteer coordinator told us that shortly before Title 42 ended, the HRC hosted as many as 800.) The kitchen staff alongside whom we served were temporary volunteers staying at the HRC themselves, and when the work slowed down after everyone had been served, they shared some of their own stories and hopes for the future with us.

On Saturday, we spent the day with Team Brownsville, an organization that welcomes those who have recently crossed the border. Unlike at the HRC, which primarily serves families with children, we met more single travelers and adult families. While handing out food, supplies, and medicine, we had the chance to chat with migrants, many of whom maintained hope in spite of incredibly challenging circumstances. One young man told us about his four-month journey north from Venezuela. Another man described how he had learned to trust in God while confined in a detention center for two months.

We spent our final day with Fr. Brian Strassburger (host of the Jesuit Border Podcast), who celebrates Mass twice a week at a migrant camp in Matamoros, Mexico. The camp's main topic of conversation: immigration appointments, which migrants request through the (glitchy) CBP One app. The wait, which can take months, is perilous. Most migrants lack work authorization in countries of passage, such as Mexico. As they wait, they rely on the limited financial support of family and friends in their often impoverished communities back home. Gangs threaten migrants' safety, extort money from them, and even kidnap people from their tents, targeting those suspected to have personal savings or other financial means and disproportionately affecting migrants of certain nationalities (e.g., Chinese).

At the same time, tremendous faith exists alongside fear and uncertainty. Some residents of the migrant camp embrace entrepreneurialism and ingenuity to meet the needs of their temporary community and themselves. For example, we met two young men who had opened a makeshift restaurant under their tarpaulins, first serving arepas, a food popular in their South American home countries, and then adding hamburgers to the menu after acquiring the business of a fellow migrant who had completed his wait in the camp.

That afternoon, Fr. Brian celebrated Mass for unaccompanied minors. These children, who entered the United States without a verifiable parent or relative, live in centers run by for-profit companies until they can be reunited with family or alternative guardianship agreements can be verified. Most were in their early teens, and some were even younger. Some told us they had been waiting for months.

After Mass, we chatted with them over snacks, talking about their favorite movies, television shows, and singers. Some of their preferences were typical of their age group (Coco, Lana Del Rey), and others (the elementary-school-age series Masha and the Bear) were means of envisioning a more carefree childhood. Some of the youth chatted away vibrantly in Spanish, and others whispered phrases in their native tongue of Q'eqchi when we asked if they spoke an indigenous language.

One of the greatest consolations of the trip was witnessing the powerful role of faith amid the challenges and uncertainties of the migration experience. In Brownsville, several recently arrived young men gave us their wishes for God to reward us for our service with "blessings and good health," and the hope of many was palpable as they took their first steps in the United States, even as they acknowledged that the path ahead would demand much of them and was lined with still more uncertainties.

On the other side of the border, Fr. Brian's homily contained a poignant call to persevere in patient and trusting endurance that was echoed in the voices of the migrant camp residents we conversed with in Matamoros. We are grateful for the chance to hear personal stories, witness unbelievable courage, and learn from the faith of people seeking a new start in the United States.

CELEBRATING CATHOLIC WOMEN IN OUR LIVES

As part of our celebration of St. Phoebe in September, we invited parishioners to share a story of a Catholic woman who has made a profound impact on their faith and how they live it out.

FROM KATHLEEN WACH:

My aunt Rosemary Wach, SNDdeN, has been a source of unconditional love and spiritual guidance my whole life. She is my late father’s older sister – and at 95, the sole survivor of the nine siblings in my father’s family. She regales us with stories about their childhood in Dayton, Ohio, madcap antics in the small house (one bathroom for eleven people!) and life lessons learned staffing the general store their father bought during the Depression.

Rosemary’s long life has been spent in the joyful service of the Lord. She joined the Sisters of Notre Dame de Namur following high school; taught elementary school (developing a love for the fearsome 8th graders) and was appointed principal by age 30. At age 33, to her considerable shock, she was appointed to the international leadership for her order in Rome. Because canon law set 35 as the minimum age for congregation’s leadership, a waiver had to be obtained. She was in Rome during the heady, thrilling years of Vatican II, when the Church was opening its windows and all things seemed possible. She arrived in Rome in full-length black habit and departed (six years later) in a sensible dress, bareheaded. She went to Kenya, to start the SND’s new mission in that country, and taught several generations of teachers at the Egoji Teachers Training College in Meru, Kenya. After 30 years, she came home to Ohio and earned a nursing degree. Returning to Africa, this time to Harare, Zimbabwe, she provided medical care for another decade.

Rosemary is now living in the SND de Namur motherhouse and nursing home in Cincinnati, Ohio, beloved by her nieces and nephews and much sought-after by staff, fellow sisters and all, because she is joyful and wise, and great-hearted.

The Communion Rite

1. My soul cries out with a joyful shout that the God of my heart is great, and my spirit sings of the wondrous things that you bring to the ones who wait. You fixed your sight on your servant's plight, and my weakness you did not spurn, so from east to west shall my name be blest. Could the world be about to turn? TO REFRAIN

REFRAIN

My heart shall sing of the day you bring. Let the fires of your jus - tice burn. Wipe a - way all tears, for the dawn draws near, and the world is a - bout to turn!

2. Though I am small, my God, my all, you work great things in me, and your mercy will last from the depths of the past to the end of the age to be. Your very name puts the proud to shame, and to those who would for you yearn, you will show your might, put the strong to flight, for the world is about to turn. TO REFRAIN

3. From the halls of power to the fortress tower, not a stone will be left on stone. Let the king beware for your justice tears ev'ry tyrant from his throne. The hungry poor shall weep no more, for the food they can never earn; There are tables spread, ev'ry mouth be fed, for the world is about to turn. TO REFRAIN

4. Though the nations rage from age to age, we remember who holds us fast: God's mercy must deliver us from the conqueror's crushing grasp. This saving word that our forebears heard is the promise which holds us bound, 'til the spear and rod can be crushed by God, who is turning the world around. TO REFRAIN

Come to the feast of heav-en and earth! Come to the ta -

1. O come and sit at my table where saints and sinners are friends.
I wait to welcome the lost and lonely to share the cup of my love. TO REFRAIN

2. O come and eat without money; come to drink without price.

3. My bread will ever sustain you through days of sorrow and woe.
